

EFA - Giving festivals a voice

The European Festivals Association is a unique network of and for arts festivals in Europe and beyond:

- Members are part of an open, powerful and representative international association.
- Members have networking opportunities which allow meeting players in other festivals and international organizations.
- Members are able to set up co-productions and share experiences with colleagues through virtual as well as physical networking.
- Members broaden their worldwide communication, promotion and marketing efforts thanks to the European and international outreach of EFA communication tools, its dynamic website and a common PR and press campaign.
- Members get regular news updates through EFA's Info Boxes, practical readers and newsletters.
- Members have full access to all databases, research reports and studies published by EFA in cooperation with other international institutions.
- Members are able to register for exclusive educational programmes such as the European Atelier for Young Festival Managers.
- Members are taking part in and represented by exclusive EFA flagship projects such as the EFA BOOKS series, the Arts Festivals' Declaration on Intercultural Dialogue and the European House for Culture.
- Members are visibly involved and represented in the European cultural political debate vis-à-vis supranational bodies and colleague networks.
- Members are participating in EFA's international mission to reach out for cooperation and interaction with festivals and partners around the globe.
